

Brisbane Data Management Luncheon

Join us August 1 at the 2018 Brisbane Q3 Data Management Luncheon

Trudy Curtis, CEO, PPDM Association

will present a talk entitled

“Shaping the Industry Together”

Learn about the Professional Petroleum Data Management (PPDM) Association and it’s current activities around the globe.

Trudy Curtis is the Chief Executive Officer of the Professional Petroleum Data Management (PPDM) Association, the global Not-For-Profit society focused on data management best practices and standards and data management as a professional discipline. Based in Calgary, Canada, Curtis has nearly four decades of years of experience in the industry and is known around the world for her outspoken advocacy of data as a strategic asset, and its management as a core business function. In 1996, she joined the PPDM Association as architect, CIO and ultimately CEO of PPDM Association. Curtis is leading the way to the emergence of data management as a global discipline, the creation and industry adoption of data management standards and best practices, the development of professional development and certification programs for data managers, and the professionalism of data management in the petroleum industry.
